Concealed Weapons Out in the Open

Permits for handguns now available

Sarah E. Scheiter

Nebraskans wishing to carry a concealed handgun may apply for a permit to do so as of Jan. 1, 2007.

The new law, titled LB 454, known as the Concealed Handgun Permit Act, was passed last year.

This law allows persons over the age of 21 to apply for a permit at the Nebraska State Patrol offices.

Applicants must complete a completed and notarized application form, proof of identification, proof of citizenship, proof of vision abilities. A current Nebraska driver's license or a Nebraska licensed ophthalmologist may certify the following forms for the latter require-

Many students at UNK are surprised and worried about the effects this new law will have. Since this opportunity really makes me feel unsafe...I think the crime rate will increase. I'm sure that they have restrictions on who will be allowed to apply for a permit, but there are a lot of people out there who just haven't had the opportunity to commit a crime yet. I'm uncomfortable with the fact that Nebraska is giving this opportunity, said Melissa Frinath, a freshman from Wayne, Neb.

Lori Gehman, a junior theatre major from Columbus, Neb., said, "Everybody should get the chance to apply for a permit, but if they have one strike against them they should get that chance taken away." Even though some believe that the permit allows the holder to carry a concelled weapon anywhere, the laws are still strict. Permit holders may not carry a concelled handgun if they are under the influcence of alcohol or any controlled substance not required. Permits are required to purchase handguns in Nebraska, but the registration of firearms is not required. All firearms are required to have serial numbers and manufacurer's identification marks intact.

Thursday, Jan. 11, the Office of Multicultural Affairs and the Martin Luther King, Jr. Planning Committee hosted a Holiday Celebration and the 2nd Annual Educational Forum titled "Equality Spreads Awakening a Dream."

The Holiday Celebration was held in the atrium of the Nebraska Student Union. The program consisted of prayer, a moment of silence to honor Martin Luther King, Jr. and the reading of the works of the civil rights heroes by members of the MLK Planning Committee. Brian Sheeves, a junior Political Science major served as the moderator for the panel discussion regarding the impact that Luther has had on hot button issues such as immigration, racial equality and economic distribution.

The panelists who participated in the forum Thursday night in the Ponderosa Room E of the Nebraska Student Union were as follows:

- Dr. William Aviles, Associate Professor, Political Science
- Dr. Eduardo Gonzalez, Associate Professor, Modern Languages
- Joan Guzman, Director, Office of Multicultural Affairs
- Dr. Claude Louishomme, Associate Professor, Political Science
- Greg Swinney, Director, Christian Student Fellowship

Dr. Linda Von Janzen, Associate Professor, History.

The very diverse combination of individuals that comprised the panel was very beneficial, as it expanded several different angles on the topics discussed.

Matthew Sullivan, a junior Criminal Justice and Social Work major from Belleville, Kan., said that having such a diverse panel sharing his or her knowledge, "Martin Luther King, Jr. had a dream that everyone, regardless of color or gender or amount of money they make would be able to be known for who they are on the inside, not the outside. Having these people talking together shows that his dream has been realized."

My blood was pumping at 17 years of cinematic fascination run through my body. It was Friday night and many moments until I would finally be able to see the latest and final Rocky movie.

I have seemed known upon hours of time into watching the Rocky movies and now, the abduction of my favorite movie series of all time. I took drive to my local Wal-Mart and did what my reasonable Rocky fan would have done decades before going to see Rocky Balboa. I walked in the door and bought a grey striped, grey, similar to the one Sylvester Stallone wore while running up the steps to the Philadelphia Museum of Art. I then drove to the cinema and could hear the tune “Granite fly out” as I get in to get to tickets to a dream world of magic.

The movie began, and joy was rising through my bone thanks to music, as this film passes powerfully through. With a strong supporting cast, such as Miles Teller and Graham Hughes, Stallone was able to grasp your attention and your heart. I am now than as people who greatly depends the ability of a 60-year-old man playing an “any which way but loose” tough, but good, balance into his favorite fans, Stallone does a stellar job of doing what he’s done best.

As the film progressed, so did my past memories of Balboa knocking out both, and the sadness when Stallone was hospitalized after going back to Rocky Jr. The physical and emotional damage Balboa went through in the previous films got my mind spun-dolphins in the cinema at the chance to Rocky Balboa came about. While the final fight scene between Balboa and Mason “The Line” Dunn played by Antonio Tarver (who is, in fact, a professional boxer) was engaging, some parts came to my refusal. I refrain from the ending for anyone, but I must say that they could not have thought of a better way to end such a splendid set of films. All of the action and achievement did did a superb job of playing their roles and it was truly amusing to see how they evolved such characters in the movie such as Synder Rico and Little Marie. This film deserves a definite two thumbs up for worthwhile performances by both Stallone and Rani Young, who played Paulie. I cannot imagine the next Rambo movie to be nearly this good, but I cannot advise that we should not count Stallone out. As far as his career and respect for the man is concerned, “It ain’t over, til it’s over.”
ARGUMENTATIVE ESSAY

The UK wrestling team vast individual, the University of Nebraska-Kearney recently hosted a comprehensive discussion on the nature of wrestling in the United States. The event, which was attended by the Nebraska-Omaha wrestling coach, the Nebraska-Nebraska State wrestling coach, and the Nebraska-Omaha wrestling team, was notable for its focus on the importance of discipline and hard work in the sport of wrestling.

The Nebraska-Omaha wrestling coach, who has been teaching and coaching wrestling for over 20 years, emphasized the importance of discipline in the sport of wrestling. He noted that discipline is necessary for wrestlers to succeed at the highest level, and that it is essential for wrestlers to develop the mental toughness and focus required to compete at the highest level.

The Nebraska-Nebraska State wrestling coach, who has been coaching wrestling for over 15 years, also emphasized the importance of discipline in the sport of wrestling. He noted that discipline is necessary for wrestlers to succeed at the highest level, and that it is essential for wrestlers to develop the mental toughness and focus required to compete at the highest level.

The Nebraska-Omaha wrestling team, which is currently ranked 11th in the nation, is known for its strong work ethic and discipline. The team has a reputation for being one of the toughest teams in the country, and its members are known for their dedication to the sport.

“Fired!”

The Battle Of 2 Billion Plus Dollars Versus 2 Hundred Plus Pounds

With all of the controversy surrounding Donald Trump and Rosie O’Donnell, I have decided to take it upon myself to see who wins a fight. With the help of our nation’s top nuclear weapons tester, our readers can now see who really wins money on Trump.

I would pay money on Trump. He is, after all, my superior.

I'm GLAD.

10 Commandments of Obtaining Handgun Permits

I. Thou shalt be a current resident of the State of Nebraska for 180 days prior to application. Thou shalt have successfully completed an approved training program.

II. Thou shalt be able to read and understand all laws relating to firearms and have a current driver's license as is required for a Class II operator's license.

III. Thou shalt not be a subject of any law relating to firearms permitting. Thou shalt not have a conviction in any court of a mis-ivory, nor have violations nor any record relating to firearms. Thou shalt not have prior guilty or no contem- porary conviction in any court or crime of violence nor as an employee of a law enforcement agency.

VII. Thou shalt not be a subject of any law relating to firearms permitting. Thou shalt not have a conviction in any court of a crime of violence nor as an employee of a law enforcement agency.

IX. Thou shalt not have a conviction of any crime in any court of a misdemeanor.

X. Thou shalt not be under 21 years of age.

Regardless of whether men will be voting in a greater number of public offices, Pelosi’s elevation as Speaker of the House marks an important advancement for women, and the new Speaker noted her selection as the breakthrough for women in the 110th Congress. “For our daughters and our grandchildren, today we have broken the marble ceil- ing, and our grandchildren, the sky is the limit,” she said. Anything is possible in life once women have broken the barriers to enter and advance in political careers.

There’s no reason for us to stop thinking that this is a breakthrough for women in the political career. In a statement on Southern Power District’s website, Gary Hoffman, President and CEO said, “Overall this is an important precedent, and we’re fortunate to have an important precedent.” Joe Green, UNK associate professor of political science said, along with managing the schedule of the three or four Speaker’s House, you can decide whether or not you want to run by office and pursue a professional political career. "I think it’s important to be a role model by having this position is really valuable, and it might very well make a great young person out there decide. This is what I want to do, and this is my chance of doing it," he said. Duffin said that while Pelosi’s selection may influence more women to run for office, it may not be an impact on the national scale. In a press conference Jan. 10, Southern Power District showed 3,425 outages and 6,352 broken poles in their seven-county area. The district showed distress at being unable to predict what individual customers would have power restored, and will not be able to predict that until they have only 500 customers left to restore. The reported estimate for the cost of repairing damages was “easily reach $80 million,” and the district was hoping for FEMA reimbursement for 70% of the cost. As of Jan. 12, Dawson Public Power District estimated in a press release that 400 customers were still without power. Since the district began working to restore power to customers on Dec. 30, over 3,600 customers had their power restored. Over 320 linemen from four states have been working to restore power to this particular district, and Operations Manager Kerry Toyster projected in a Jan. 12 press release that all residential service would have power restored by Friday, which may not be an impact on the national scale. The power districts declared a state of emergency for three being fewer women in American national 1960s who were willing to break the rules to earn their stripes and then move up. Duffin said.

According to de Goede, the district was suffering from "one of the worst ice storms in district history and maybe the worst ever for Nebraska. We are receiving 15 to 20 mail boxes and the daily drivers of power districts have drafted retired employees for help, as well as hiring short-term employees. The district was without power for 12 days. "It wasn't really like the worst ever for Nebraska. We are receiving 15 to 20 mail boxes and the daily drivers"
