We are really encouraging the presidents to step up and demonstrate their leadership...

Brandon J. Beute Assistant to the Dean of Student Life

The evening of Monday, February 12th was cold and blustery, but did not stop a group of students and UNK administration from a meeting that is a subsequence for the student organizations of the University of Nebraska at Kearney. The President's Council is the sworn link in an attempt to separate communication at, and around, UNK. It is being launched this semester to bring together the presidents of the 160 student organizations once a month, in an effort to increase communication between UNK and the student organizations, and between the organizations themselves, as well as discuss the issues and experiences that each president faces during their term. By doing this, the student organization presidents will be better informed of the events and news from other organizations so that congruency is established and a support system can be put in place. Brandon Beute, Assistant to the Dean of Student Life, is organizing the council and conducts the meetings.

After a series of focus groups with various presidents during the Fall 2006 semester, it is optimistic to expect the presidents of the presidents who will make through this coming Spring and on into the next school year. "We are hoping to get the presidents of each organization at our meetings at some point in time, but for right now we are looking at those presidents who have heard the call, are interested in it, and are going to be able to help out from this organization at its very earliest stages," Beute explained. By hosting a series of focus groups in the first semester 2006, to gauge the interest of organizational presidents, Beute found the kind of responses to be phenomenal, and planning the initial meeting began as more presidents voiced their intentions and ideas for the council's establishment.

With each meeting, Beute is hoping to establish these types of communication.

The first is communication between UNK administration and the student organizations; the second is communicating issues pertinent to student organizations to a wider and higher university level, and the third is communicating these issues amongst departments,as well as more presidents to meet and demonstrate their leadership and their willingness to come to the UNK, as well as Kearney, community. Meetings are open to any student organization's president or designee to encourage presidents to come to the meetings to represent their respective organizations.

For these reasons, the group has met with so far and successfully, it is anticipated that at least one and a half hours of the presidnet's time once a month.

We have regularly scheduled meetings of the Presidents' Council new to UNK.

The Japanese Hatsumode festival draws crowd

Calligraphy,food, costumes make event a success

Eric R. Roelof Anettop Staff Writer

Friday, February 16 was not only the celebration of Valentine's Day, but UNK hosted the Japanese Festival in the Great Rooms of the Student Union.

The festival brought traditional music, art, dance, culture, and food to the Kearney community. The goal of the festival goes beyond a celebration of what the Japanese students that reside here have to offer. "We want to try to show our culture and let people know that we are a chance to hang out with some great people," sophomore and president of the Japanese Association at Kearney (JAK) Akira Hisa, said.

This day is called Hatsumode, it's the first day of the new year. Guests were greeted with eager smiles and surrounded by all the activities. Some of the stations included Japanese Calligraphy, Yokusai, authentic Japanese food and a game called Happy Laughing. "We pay for good fortune for the upcoming year," Hisa said. "There is a list to do with all the food, games and calligraphy. We want to introduce our culture and help American people to be familiar, it's a chance to really share and set out the activities." The festival brings enjoyment to the guests and hosts alike. "My favorite is the calligraphy, it is traditional and some take them home and share, it helps create a connection," sophomore, Kei Kornchuk said.

"I love the food, it's real Japanese style and totally different from American which has too much salt and sugar, it's a good way to exchange cultures and make friends," junior Daisuke Sekino said.

The next festival will be held in April and will be held with twice as many students from the Japanese culture, activities and food.

The whole experience of the Japanese Festival is not only enjoyable to come to the meeting to see everything, they look happy so I am happy."
With your new car you will drive down 2nd Ave. and you will find a lion with a Leo in its mouth? One word, run!

The mauling lions will not be in your near future but you could be attacked by a dog or the notorious Louie the Loper.

Stay away from open windows. Birds will ruin them forever for you. Also look out for flying debris it is known to come at you when you least expect it.

After meeting your soulmate on Facebook and then getting served your luck will take a turn you will find yourself on an island alone. The island however, is in Sears and you are being charged hourly for using their display.

Your mom will make you spaghetti and you will drip sauce all over your new screen T-shirt and then after dinner you will slap your mom for making such runny sauce.

Don’t walk under ladders they are bad luck. If you should walk under a ladder you will likely die or be admonished in pain.

Pisces and Leo have now backstabbed you, those lying hos. It is okay you will become better friends with an Aries who is never never to be in love and Leo will beat running on their heels. Silly, they will be mauled by a lion but not before they have their clothes stolen.

Dear Editors,

I would like to address a few of the comments made in Adelman’s Adelson column entitled "Writing Intensive (wi) Usual" in the February 21, 2007 edition of The Antelope. Mr. Adelman states his desire to go on a procrastination- ridden, transformed, angry, tyrannical, and warping decision to the lowering of the Writing Intensive requirements here at UNK.

It appears that Mr. Adelman is correct in predicting an unfor- seen trade. I would like to clarify the actions that the Faculty Senate has taken with regards to the Writing Intensive (WI) program as well as some of the facts that are being ignored to improve the general education program at UNK.

First, I would like to offer a little back- ground on the original purpose of the Writing Intensive Program. At the time of its inception, the WI program was intended to improve the student's general problem-solving skills.

I know people have written to the program in question, or teachers who want to make sure they are getting those skills to improve their writing intensive' programs. There is obviously a lot to be done in these programs, and we should have met their psychology and sociology requirements. Heck, let’s throw in a few more to fill that argument too. In this respect, the "textbook- reading intensive" program can be measured by the amount of time students spend reading and writing, which must be accomplished in order to succeed. The faculty senate must insist on that...[a continuation of this thought].

I believe anyone who would find that a challenge to a UNK faculty member, who also has a straight face, could not see that writing is not important in their careers or in the future careers of their stu- dents regardless of disciplines. Further, I believe that it would be difficult to find many new UNK facul- ty members who truly believe that it is not the responsability of a university to take steps for students to receive a well-rounded education, one that is necessary to be a responsible citizen not only of the United States but also of the world. I strongly encourage Mr. Adelman, in the future, to avoid procrastinating and discuss the complete story from the primary source on campus again. This is an unimportant, angry trade.

NCAA Championships come to UNK

Great job with the UNK jumps for the Lopers. Yount said.

The coaches have done an amazing job of preparing everyone for conference. They want to do well just as bad as we do. We all know how much is at stake and we know that this is the time to step up and perform. It's going to be intense, but this is the moment of our lives. It's the time when we face our biggest test. We want to dominate our opponents. It's time to show our true colors. The coaches have done an amazing job of preparing everyone for conference.

Adrian Rieker

The stage has been set, the area has been chosen and the UNK staff...
As early as he could remember, basketball had been apart of his life. Jura began playing when he was very young, but he remembers some of his earliest memories were playing basketball for "ganas," Jura said. "That, and I have to add the receipt."

When Jura was 10, he led the Lopers in points, rebounds, assists, steals, and blocks, coming a long way from when he first came to UNK.

"You can’t be one dimensional. When you’re a player at this level, you have to be at a high-caliber, you have to be able to do some special things," Jura said. "I was kind of the one dimensional player that could do all that going inside scoring. He was a great person and a good model for me and I tried to follow his path. I was fortunate to have someone like him on the program when I was coming in," Jura said.

"In a Feb. 5 victory over Colorado Christian, Jura passed current UNK head coach Ken Kopp for 19th place on the all-time scoring list," Fischer said.

"I’ve always played it to have always come natural to me. I love playing basketball and that’s been the one thing this year, I think and directing the offense," Jura said. "I’m good at handling the ball in my hands out there, and that makes a decision for me make good decisions."

As a 16-year-old Jura stepped into the 16th Lady Loper in school history with that responsibility. "I’m excited to try that and direct the offense too," Jura said.

"I’m going to try to get past this one and eventually go out and enjoy the rest of this season," Jura said.

"What’s the next step after college for Jura? He has the option for either a postgraduate year or a professional year in the foreign basketball league team- ing. Jura said, "I might try to play for a couple friends that I still keep in touch with."

The Career Fair is over

What do you do next?

Chasity Brock
Guidance Student
In Free Enterprise

So you recently attended a career fair and figured the hard part is over! Think again! There are several ways to ensure that you made the best possible impressions on the general employer you met at the career fair. Don’t make the mistake of thinking that as soon as you have spoken to the last potential employer and left the career fair that is all over. It is a final. A follow-up can help to give you the competitive edge that you seek.

Send Thank You Letters
No later than one week after the fair, be sure to send a follow-up thank you letter to each potential employer that you met. If it is a large firm, the interviewer will prob- ably not even be aware that you took a note on a phone call in most cases. If you are given a business card with contact information, it is completely acceptable to send your thank you letter electronically. However, your best bet is to follow-up by letter and have it in the box.

Be Persistent
If you have completed the necessary follow-up procedures that are suggested for the employer and have not heard from the employer in a reasonable amount of time, it is okay to send a letter or email to the employer inquiring about the status of your application. Your due diligence afterward can be as impor- tant as your preparation. You have made the most of your career fair experience when it results in subse- quent interviews. If you have fol- lowed the “before,” “during,” and “after” steps, you are probably on your way to making one or more interviews—and better yet, landing a great career!

Keep in mind that all is not lost if you don’t land a job. Career fairs also offer great practice in perfect- ing networking and interviewing skills. Talk to as many people as you can, never underestimate the value of face to face contact from leading companies. And, just as importantly, listen to them, too. Pay attention to the questions they ask and to the kind of information that’s offered. It’s impossible to learn without something of value.

Take full advantage of the many services that Career Services at the University of Nebraska at Kearney has to offer. The Career Services website provides a variety of infor- mation and services are free to UNK students. Stop by and use all that Career Services has to offer!

Playing the Name Game

The Department of Modern Languages at the University of Nebraska at Kearney is currently sponsoring the UKFL Foreign Film Series.

This year, the Department will be showing films from Spanish, Chinese, German, Japanese and Arabic that all have English subtitles.

Selections are featured as part of the campus and are open to the general public.

The film series is free and open to the public.

The first film of the season was Du 1 (The Dinner Game), a French film directed by Francis Veber in 1990.

The film starred Jean-Pierre Bacri and a group of friends who mightily fumbled a dinner for friends and their wife to choose the biggest fish.

The series, designed to introduce students to films selected because it had been shown previously and enjoyed by the audience.

The film is a comedy, however, and is not intended for students who are not interested in the nature of New Orleans food and culture.

The film has its next appearance at the University of New Orleans.
