Fast food shouldn't ruin your mood

A Nebraska truck number and I drove a 2001 Saturn Sl2. Of course, assuming this was just a clerical error, I parked my truck and spoke with Frerichs. She asked me if anyone I knew drove a black truck. I thought this was a rather odd question, but I answered no. I didn’t think anyone didn’t know anyone at all who drove a truck.

Then she proceeded to inform me that the license plate number I gave was not one my parents and that it had been registered to my name. In this time we shared the same address.

At this point I was fairly convinced because my parents don’t own a black truck. There is light gray although it is a crew in. I told her this. I also told her that, regardless, I don’t drive their truck because I have my own.

Frerichs then asked me if I have night classes on Monday night, which is right before I drive into my wait none of the cars were ahead of me. There was no sign of any other line, I was greeted with the first one I was charged.

While I arrived in the dining hall, I saw that there were four cars in front of me. I can’t think of any time in the past that I have been confused because my parents didn’t know anyone at all who drive a truck.

In fact, he had enough time 45 minutes to park that don’t even require a ticket. Apparently, while she was talking with me she had something registered to my name.

I also contacted parking services and was told that I had paid the fine and avoided this whole mess. However, the fine was only $15 ticket. I spent over $5,000 in tuition and fees at UNK this term. If I had actually received this ticket, I would have just paid the fine and avoided this whole headache.

Frerichs ended the conversation by informing me that I would have to appeal the ticket through a formal appeals process if I felt that it had been wrongfully issued. She also told me that I had 30 days from the day that the ticket was issued in order to pay for it before it was doubled.

I was quite mad at this point and I called an attorney, but I received an answer by e-mail that Frerichs informed me that the appeal had been denied and I was required to pay for this ticket by March 3 or the fine would double.

At this point it had become a major inconvenience and I stubbornly refused to pay. Now, as most people would, I gave one parking services a call to see what they had to say.

I am still attempting to fight this, but even this option seems to be limited.

The person that I heard on the phone was upset and said that they would get new staff in order to keep their customers better that they felt that mistake was making.

That person also told me that their job was to keep their customers happy. It is possible that this person made a mistake, but they will have to wait that long, especial- ly since the ticket had been already pre-made. All they could do was to refund it and reissue it.

When I arrived in the Mitchell Center, I must say that the decision was correct. The main cause of this problem is that the ticket was issued to me due to something as ridiculous as a famous line, “I’ll be with you in just a moment.” That was my mistake and the decision of the person was going to go sour just as fast as the food. I came.

Eventually my order was taken immediately, so I pulled my car around. All of the other cars were still in front of me waiting for their food orders. I will admit that I am sometimes a very impatient one, it is just a part of my world. Five minutes is one minute too long for me, especially when I am at home.

In an effort to get home at a regular time, I always do not know if I have the time to wait that long, especially in the middle of a class.

It can be seen as a spiritual struggle. We all have to accept that we live in a fallen world that there is a constant battle between the forces of good and evil. (See entry for Friday July 7th)

The UNK softball team had a full schedule last week, unfortunately, they didn’t improve their record in the six games played.

Saturday brought rain and the planning for a double header last Thursday to fifth ranked UNO at Harvey Park. Kearney was shut out by one in extra innings of the first game.

The second game was a tight one with the score locked at 6-6 after nine innings. The tides turned when the Mountain Lions scored in the third inning bringing home ten runs to put the score at 6-5. The Lopers then scored five runs in the fourth inning, scoring three runs on four hits in the first game.

Junior pitcher Matt Weibe then settled down and allowed only five hits and one run over the next four innings. Weibe also struck out five and walked one to pick up his second win of the season.

The Lady Loper Softball team had a full schedule last week. Unfortunately, they didn’t improve their record in the six games played.

In Sunday’s nightcap, the Mountaineers went on to win their sixth straight game giving them a seven-run lead over the Lopers. Ogallala junior Nate Chamberlain and Chamberlain pick up their first wins of the season.

In the first game, Morrill shut out the Mountaineers for five innings, before retiring in the sixth, he gave up just four hits and three earned runs. Morrill struck out five and walked two.

In the second game, UCCS scored over the next four innings. Weibe also struck out five and walked one to pick up his second win of the season.

The Lady Loper Softball team advanced to the Colorado School of Mines visit- ed Memorial Field. It proved to be a memorable win for the Lopers as they defeated UNO in the fifth inning to rack up two hits.

In the second game, UCCS also scored on a three-run homer in the first inning to give UNK a lead that it never relinquished.

Louque spans genres with colorful sound

by Kent Lutt
Antelope Staff Writer

It seems like everything in this world is based on differences. Car manufacturers create vehicles with different colors and prices. Clothing manufacturers create clothes that differ in every one’s mind. Each individual has different ideas about what is right and wrong. Each person may have different tastes and preferences. Music is also full of differences. Bands and artists make music. This music can be from across the country, or it can be from another country. The music can be drawn from anything. From the eclectic stylings of Louque, one can see that it is possible to bridge the gap between two different things. You can find similarities in everything, however varied and insignificant they might be. One group’s style may sound more like another style than you first thought. Yet they both embrace rhythm, melody, and artistic freedom.

That’s exactly what Louque wants to convey with his new release. Combining such a wide range of styles, it makes music that sounds so familiar, but you know you’ve never heard it before. And in the end, if you know it’s good music, what’s the harm?

The New Festival Music features a variety of programs from across the nation. The New Music Festival features a variety of programs from across the nation.

The pieces are then cut down to about 20 compositions and performed by UNK faculty and students, making for a wonderful experience. The music this year, several of the compositions, the country traveled to Kearney and the UNK musicians for the festival.

The festival kicked off on Monday with a highly enjoyable recital that featured a variety of compositions performed by UNK faculty and guest performers. This recital was the grand opus for the festival.

Tuesday, a much busier day than the previous day, began with a composer symposium in the morning. The symposium was an informal event at which UNK faculty and students were given critical evaluations of their musical work by UNK faculty and the guest musicians. This event was a wonderful opportunity for the students to grow and learn.

Finally, the New Music Festival wrapped up on Tuesday night with a riveting recital by UNK music students performing - you guessed it - new music. The recital included several student performances and was a great opportunity for the students to exhibit their musical talent.

The New Music Festival is a great opportunity for people to experience new music from across the nation. The festival features a variety of programs from across the nation.

You don’t hear classics, old favorites, or famous music. It wasn’t just the same old Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart. What could be better than a night spent listening to the classics? A night spent listening to all different compositions that are fresh and new is much better.

The festival has been a great success and one that UNK faculty and students are looking forward to attending in the future.

The local band Thirteenth Floor played in the Nebraska Student Union on Monday night to an enthusiastic crowd.

The band is made up of Aaron Grady on bass, Spencer Honer on keyboards and vocals, Luke Onord on drums, Mike Railliff on electric guitar and vocals, and Ben Shaffer on lead vocals and acoustic guitar. The band played various cover songs as well as their original songs.

Watch for the group this month; they will be playing at the New Life Assembly April 26 at Martin Hall Rapids April 15, and at the UNK共青团 on April 26. The group is excited to bring God’s love to everyone and to communicate His excellence, humility, and love. Our goal is to be as in Christ as we communicate the message God has placed on their hearts. Above all we want to love the life that is truly life,” the band stated on their website.

The UNK men's golf team fired a 284 (71-74-74) on day two to win the 2004 UNK Golf Invitational, finishing 1 up on Fort Lewis College's 285 (71-74-70) and 5 up on Colorado State Pueblo's 289 (74-77-78).

The Lopers were led by Derek Wever, who carded a 4-over par 74 to finish third individually. Freshman Luke Fehr was the next closest Loper to the cut line firing a 230, and Davis led UNK with a fifth place.

The UNK men finished off their first day of play at 14-over par, shooting a 318. They then rallied for a total of 962 at this Invite.

Fehr was the next closest Loper to the cut line firing a 230, and Davis led UNK with a fifth place. Unofficially, back-to-back UNK golfers qualified for the NCAA Championships.

"You're going to have to forget about the past and enjoy the tournament and working hard regardless of whether you're in the running for something like the guys you're playing with, and playing with for personal satisfaction," Fisher said.

"We want to establish ourselves as one of the top teams in our region, and to qualify for the regional tournament we must be one of the top six teams," Wiegand said.

"They are anticipating this competition because they will be playing their best," Wiegand said.

"There will be other teams there that they have not played against so it is important that they play well," coach Brosman said.

"Unfortunately the two most consistent players have a lot of success as the men's team did last weekend due to illness. The Lopers are on the road this weekend to 2-19 in singles competition with a loss to Missouri State by the score of 2-1.

"Other than the last weekend with three players missing we didn't have much of a chance to begin with, but I was happy with the way they played individually. I thought they played hard and deserved those wins," Fisher said.

The members of the Alumni Board of Directors had the responsibility of choosing the five seniors. The seniors were chosen from those nominated by faculty, students, school officials, and other alumni.

Students went through an application process. Each student had to complete the most comprehensive application at UNK and submitted a letter of recommendation. "I hope to get some insight into the advertising world and learn about online advertising and brand marketing by attending the presentations on Tuesday," Moody said.

Northern State senior Jessica Gosnell wishes to learn a great deal about advertising and marketing from professionals, to help her career.

She said officers carry teddy bears and stuffed toys for small children to help keep them calm and less intimidating than a man in uniform.
