Laptops, textbooks, no more?

Tablets take over, showing tremendous growth in 2011, with projected 377 million to be sold by 2016.

BY BROOKE ALSTROM

iPads, Nooks, Kindles... Oh my! Throughout the spring semester, everywhere you went, students found multiple uses for these mini computers. Returning your textbooks at the end of the semester could eventually become a thing of the past. With a variety of tablets and e-readers available, students are looking to get rid of those bricks in their backpacks. Why carry around a laptop when you can trade it in for a device that weighs less than a pound?

"I love playing games on the iPad. But it's super handy to use in class. I can follow along with PowerPoints, look up information to contribute to discussion during class, take notes on it. It's a more portable version of a laptop for me," said Logan Mitchell, a senior exercise science major from Elm Creek.

With all the options, it can be hard to choose which electronic device is right for your lifestyle. There are tons of tablets and e-readers out there, but geek.com calls the iPad, Nook and Kindle Fire the "cream of the crop for most people." Although they may look relatively similar, these little guys have a few big differences. For instance, the iPad has a built-in camera, while the Nook and Kindle Fire do not.

Another thing you may want to take into consideration when looking into a tablet is the size. The Kindle Fire is the smallest of the three in height and width, although the Nook weighs the least at just .88 pounds. While the iPad's screen is the largest, the Kindle Fire or Nook would probably be your

KINDLE MOVING UP ON IPAD

The iPad 2 debuted in 2011 selling 40.4 million units, accounting for 62 percent of all tablets. However, in the fourth quarter of 2011, Apple Inc.'s share of tablets sold dropped to 57 percent and Kindle fired up the Android competition, doubling its share of Android market in the last two months.

Apple is still well ahead of the pack, having sold more than 15.4 million iPads in the holiday period, whereas second-place Amazon sold 3.9 million. But that was still enough to leapfrog Apple’s other competition, companies like Samsung Electronics, which sold 2.1 million Android tablets and Barnes and Noble Inc., which sold 1.9 million Nook tablets.

THOENE OFFERS FINAL FREE HUGS

For the last time in his college career graduating senior Wes Thoene, an organizational communication major from Hartington, gives out free hugs in front of the Nebraskan Student Union on Monday. Thoene and several friends gave out free hugs during the semester after seeing a YouTube video of Juan Mann's Free Hugs campaign. The idea was to make others feel more connected to society as a whole. "We are becoming socially disconnected," Thoene said. "For me, the biggest thing is if I can just brighten someone’s day with a small gesture." Thoene, shy as a freshman, was part of the Honors Program, active in Mortar Board and an RA.

Letter to editor:
Grad thrives on foundation of family studies program

My name is Joanne Swiatek-Bonner and I am a senior at College of Saint Mary in Omaha. I went to UNK from 2003-2008. I ventured to Kearney with no idea as to what I wanted to be when I grew up. I joined the Alpha Phi sorority and welcomed my new role as a student. Throughout my first year I found myself drawn to the Family Studies department. I felt inspired by Dr. Stolzer’s lectures on breast feeding and driven by Dr. Assay’s stories of being a marriage and family counselor. I knew the Family Studies program would be an area I would thrive in for the next four years.

I graduated on the Dean’s list in May of 2008 and embarked on my “adult” life. Little did I know that the part-time job as a CNA at Children’s Hospital and Medical Center would be where I stayed for the next six months, as I was unable to find a full time job which paid more.

Finally, the student loan bills started to come in. I found myself calling the loan center every other month asking for lower payments, as I was unable to afford the minimum payment. I was at a crisis point. After speaking with my brother, an occupational therapist in California, I decided to fly out for a vacation and to job shadow him. After the trip to California, I had found an answer as to what to do. I was going back to school for occupational therapy.

What is occupational therapy? As defined by the Occupational Therapy Practice Framework, OTPF, occupational therapy is therapy to help promote the “health...

FACEOFF!

Flexing his muscles April 25, Nathan Klaus, a senior general studies major from Kearney, can finally relax. He is graduating after spending seven years at UNK and switching his major three times. Klaus enjoys weightlifting as well as showing off his “guns.” He also recently became engaged. Klaus hopes to go into campus ministry.

Torres Takes on World

Go online for more of Torres' story following her diagnosis of lupus.

Jessie Torres, a senior criminal justice major from Scottsbluff, prepares for her last presentation ever at UNK. After graduating she will pursue a career in criminal justice. Torres was diagnosed with lupus when she was 14, but she worked through the pain to college graduation making the Dean’s List and staying active in her sorority and other organizations through the Office of Multicultural Affairs.

and participation of people, organizations, and populations through engagement in occupation” (OTPF, 2008, p 625). By helping patients participate in meaningful occupations such activities of daily living (bathing, grooming, dressing), work, and leisure, they lead more satisfying lives. Occupational therapists want patients to be as independent as possible because that, in return, leads to a more satisfying life.

best choice if you are looking for something that will fit in just one hand.

“I love my Kindle Fire because it fits easily into my purse and I can take it anywhere,” said Cathy Peterson, a senior nursing major from Omaha.

Although the Kindle Fire has the least amount of storage availability, you’ll get the most bang for your buck with its AmazonPrime feature and Silk web browser. The Kindle Fire comes in at just $200, offering one of the best bonuses for students: an affordable price.

The Nook comes in at around $250 and doesn’t have many unique bonuses to set it apart from the other two tablet options, aside from an SD card reader. The iPad, meanwhile, has quality associated with Apple’s well-known name. The iPad offers the best selection of applications, with access to Apple’s App Store and additional options like iMessage and iCloud. One downside for students here is that it can cost you upwards of $500.

With the cost of print texts rising, college textbook companies have begun to offer options including cheaper downloadable texts that bypass the cost of printing and shipping and build-your-own-texts with chapters from multiple sources as an option for professors to consolidate separate texts into one.

Choosing a tablet really just comes down to personal choice. It is not unrealistic to project publishers will soon offer all text books in a less costly downloadable format; it’s only a matter of time before you might need your own tablet.

I attribute my success thus far in the OT program to my base from UNK’s family studies program. I have a thorough knowledge base on family psychology and great person-to-person experiences. OT’s need to know about resources in the community and the family studies program required a lot of wonderful community involvement. I can interact with patients at a professional level because the great professors and staff at UNK. I must also add that my writing skills were far advanced because of Dr. Crosswhites diligent efforts at perfecting our APA!

As an OT I am there for patients to help improve health and wellness. As a family studies major I was there to improve health and wellness in the family unit. Both fields are present to develop healthier well being and functionality. So in the end I thank UNK for leading me to the OT program here at College of Saint Mary.
