

Antelope continues tradition at UNK

Antelope Staff
Editors

Q: What is The Antelope?

A: The Antelope is a UNK tradition that continues to communicate to readers each week, in the fall and spring semesters. A student-run campus publication since 1910, The Antelope informs readers about current news, sports and community events. The publication also fosters UNK journalism students.

The Antelope provides opportunity for students to report, write and edit stories with an actual newspaper staff environment. Writers enter the Kearney community to gather story ideas and report on current events. After stories are generated, the editors rework and prepare the stories for the publication date. The editors work together to create the layout for each week's paper before it is printed.

The information contained in each issue of The Antelope is further strengthened through two other sources. The campus radio station, 91.3 KLPR, and UNK's television production staff coordinate with The Antelope team to cover side stories and other events relating to the stories found in each week's publication.

Readers gain more insight from this intricate interaction between UNK's print, radio and television media.

Q: Where may students find current issues of The Antelope?

A: The Antelope newspaper can be found in several places around campus including the Calvin T. Ryan Library, the Nebraskan Student Union, Founders Hall and other campus facilities. Most Q: Where is The Antelope office located?

A: The Antelope office is located in Mitchell Center, adjacent to the Calvin T. Ryan Library. Simply follow the hallway to the secretary's desk where you can be directed to the main Antelope office.

Q: How may students join The Antelope?

A: Students are welcome to stop by The Antelope office to visit with the editors and writers on staff. Applications for the next semester of work are available upon request. Send questions, comments or other e-mail to any of the following addresses:

Kent Lutt
Managing Editor

Kent Lutt is a senior majoring in mass media with a journalism emphasis and a minor in broadcasting. Lutt is originally from Columbus. He attended Lakeview High School and began taking journalism classes there. As a member of the senior yearbook staff, he became interested in the use of word structures to convey emotion and poetry within stories. Graduating from high school in 2002, Lutt began journalism classes at the University of Nebraska at Kearney. He wrote entertainment and news stories for The Antelope as a staff writer his sophomore year. He was then elected to serve as the entertainment editor for the publication his junior year.

As entertainment editor, Lutt discovered the joys of working with writers. “I love working with writers who are passionate about their writing styles,” Lutt said. “Not only do the people you interview provide some life to the content of a story, but the writer instills it with his or her own unique touch.” Lutt is excited about serving as The Antelope’s managing editor this year. He feels privileged to help guide a new staff through the publication process and learn from them as well.

Julia Stumkat
News Editor

Julia Stumkat is a senior double-majoring in journalism and sociology, with a minor in English. Stumkat is an international student from Rostock, Germany. She has been living in the United States for three years. She is studying abroad because she thinks it is important to get to know people from different countries including their cultures and languages.

“We live in an age of globalization, in which different nations can learn from each other,” she said. “To network with people from different cultures opens one’s horizon and helps to eliminate stereotypes.”

Stumkat believes that the combination of local and international experiences, backgrounds and ideas enriches the academic and social life of a university as well as its newspaper.

She served as a news writer for The Antelope last semester. Being part of the newspaper reinforced her career goal to become a journalist. She noticed that her articles could influence people in a positive way by making them think, talk and take action.

Stumkat was an intern at the Kearney Hub over the summer. She thinks that the experience improved her research and writing skills to be a good news editor this year.

Jamie Dusin
Sports Editor

Jamie Dusin is a senior at UNK with a major in journalism: news editorial and a minor in mathematics. She is from Phillipsburg, Kan., where she was an editor for her high school newspaper and yearbook. “I love being able to inform other people of what is important in their community,” Dusin said. “And I am really looking forward to being able to work on the paper again as an editor who will be able to help decide content and try to improve the layout and the number of readers.” Dusin has served as a news reporter for The Antelope and she has also been on the photography staff. Dusin is a member of the Honors Program and the president of the Honors Student Advisory Board. She is also an RA in Stout Hall.

Francisco Gomes
Advertising Manager

Hi. My name is Francisco Gomes, and I am the advertising manager for The Antelope newspaper. My major is advertising, and I expect to graduate in December 2005. I have been working for The Antelope Newspaper for two and a half years. Last fall, we experienced many difficulties, and we made it work. And now we have the best team working for The Antelope. I want to congratulate everyone for his or her professionalism and teamwork. It is too bad that most of our staff this semester is graduating. Everything is going to start all over again. And I will still be here, ready to work on The Antelope.

Blake Mullanix
Entertainment Editor

How’s it? My name is Blake Mullanix. I am a senior mass media major, marketing minor at UNK. I am 22 years old, native of Benkelman (where?) I enjoy reality television, filing taxes and doing dishes. I am looking forward to being the entertainment editor for the Antelope this semester. Hopefully my staff of writers and I will be able to keep you up to date with all of the happenings around the Kearney scene (however, this may mean less stories and pictures from MONA, sorry if you actually read those, because I don’t). So if you enjoy reading concert, album and movie reviews, the entertainment section will be for you.

Heather J. Berney
Layout Editor

The front page will be saved for real news. I mean violence and human anguish. We need more readers, and words like “Murder” should get the public’s attention. If there’s no real news, we’ll make it up. Just kidding. But, we are going to make things more racy. We’re gonna make Playboy look like Better Homes and Gardens. The Antelope needs some skin. Still kidding. Seriously, though, I’ve never had any trouble finding newsworthy people or events at and around UNK. I’m amazed at the amount of doors that swing open for reporters. I’ve learned a great deal about writing, and the people about which I have written. I hope the writers and editors can interest you, too. Check us out this fall. Thanks for reading!

Kathlene Jordan
Photo Editor

Kathlene Jordan is a junior at UNK, majoring in journalism and minoring in business administration. In May 2004, Jordan received an associate’s degree in business administration from Northeast Community College (NECC) and transferred to UNK. She is the newly elected secretary of Students in Mass Media (SIMM) and avidly enjoys writing as well as photography. Jordan served as a staff photographer for The Antelope last semester and will become a staff writer during the fall of 2006. She likes to spend time with friends as well as travel. Jordan has lived in a number of states, originally born in Kentucky. In November 2002, she made Nebraska her permanent residence. Scheduled to graduate in December 2006, Jordan would like to work as a news writer for a daily newspaper or become a public relations spokesperson for a company. She is undecided as to where to begin her career, whether in Nebraska or somewhere else.

ISA faces challenges of a new year

ISA
INTERNATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

The International Students Association (ISA) has always been a strong student organization on the campus, with its purpose being the involvement of international students in UNK's social, cultural and academic activities. In staying true with its purpose the ISA is going to have an information outlet on the upcoming Blue and Gold Day. The ISA also has new executive board members for the upcoming academic year. The new board is not only excited about the upcoming events of the year but it also hopes to take the performance of the ISA to an even higher level. The ISA has also has a new snappy logo, which symbolizes that students from all corners of the world come to UNK. It has always been a tradition of the ISA to have a weekly meeting every Friday in Case Hall at 7 – 8 p.m., and the new board promises to keep that tradition. The first meeting for this year will begin in September.

We want you.
